MYANMAR

Fighting in southeast Myanmar has continued during the reporting period, resulting in further civilian displacement. Partners reported that more than 3,000 people in Thanton Township and about 6,000 people in Thanbyuzayat Township in Mon State have fled their homes since 1 June. Numbers and locations are still being verified. At the same time, at least 11,000 internally displaced people (IDPs) within Bilin Township, more than 5,000 IDPs in Loikaw Township, and 2,000 IDPs in Demoso Township in Kayah State have returned to their places of origin. As a result of the returns, the overall number of IDPs in the country's southeast has decreased over the past week with 237,800 still living in displacement because of conflict and displacement since the 2021 military takeover. Humanitarian partners have gained modest access for the delivery of assistance to some new areas in the southeast over recent weeks, but support is still falling well short of overall needs.<sup>4</sup>

SRI LANKA

Amidst Sri Lanka's worst economic crisis since independence, humanitarian partners estimate that nearly 5.7 million people are now in need of immediate life-saving assistance. The economic crisis has particularly impacted food security, agriculture, livelihoods, and access to health services. In May, food inflation stood at 57.4 per cent, while shortages of key food items, as well as fuel for cooking, transport, and industry, remain widespread, with ongoing daily power outages. Nearly 5 million people (22 per cent of the population) are currently in need of food assistance. Latest surveys reveal that 86 percent of households are using at least one coping mechanism such as reducing food intake, including skipping meals. In health, currently close to 200 essential medicines are now out of stock, with a predicted shortage of another 163 critical over the next two to three months. Additionally, over 2,700 essential surgical and more than 250 regular laboratory items are also out of stock. Due to power cuts and the lack of fuel to operate generators, many hospitals have had no choice but to postpone routine and non-urgent surgeries and procedures.<sup>5</sup>
