Background

Mon National College (MNC) is part of higher education programs for Mon Youths and students in southern Myanmar. The college is established with the support of Mon communities, parents, and local individuals who are interested in community-based education. The college is also established with the demand of local youths who cannot attend higher education in major cities due to cost and accessibility. Local Mon parents have been demanding closer and better education programs in the local for the local and to the local. Mon language-speaking teachers and other external teachers are pleased that they can teach in the local areas where students are well supported. External teachers are pleased that they can teach in the local areas where students are well supported in terms of accommodation and welfare. The college is operated self-funded by the Mon people and community with partial funds from other charities.

Mon National College is a hub of learning for post-high school level, vocational training, and higher education by using national and international education resources. Students at Mon National High School will be transformed to Mon National College to complete post-high school education qualifications and achievements. Students are selected accepted for entry comprised of assessments based on their areas of learning. Mon National Education Committee (MNEC) is a learning body for the sustainability of the college until it is fully functional by itself.
